When should I call on a Financial Planner?

As early as possible. As a professional adviser, it should be possible in the early stages to quickly identify which, if any of the adviser's skills can be best utilised. Sometimes a brief telephone call can identify whether or not an initial meeting is necessary. Sometimes it will be appropriate for us to help identify the potential problems and opportunities in the early stages, while in others it will be necessary to be involved only towards the end of the process.

The important message is that opening a dialogue early with Scrutton Bland may save a huge amount of time and money later.

How much will advice cost?

As with any professional service, our aim is to "add value" and ultimately save clients' time and money. In all cases, the service is "advice-led" rather than reliant on product sales and you can be assured that fees charged are always agreed in advance and are fair and reasonable.

Our charges are determined by the type of advice, as follows:

- All initial advice is provided on a time costed (£ per hour) fee. This includes fact-gathering, research, reports & recommendations and implementation.
- Ongoing annual review work is charged on a percentage of funds under advice.

A fee range estimate will be provided at the outset.

We will endeavour to seek payment of our fees from the financial plans arranged on your behalf. Alternatively, we will invoice you direct if you would prefer.
